REPUBLICAN PARTY NOTE:

A vote for President of the United States, is for the sole purpose of securing an expression of the sentiment and will of the party voters with respect to candidates for nomination for said office, and the vote of the State at large is considered as advisory to the delegates and alternates at large to the National Conventions; and the vote of the respective congressional districts is considered advisory to the delegates and alternates of said congressional districts to the National Convention.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY NOTE:

Under the provisions of the Illinois Delegate Selection Plan for the 2008 Democratic National Convention, the "Illinois presidential primary election is a 'binding' primary. Accordingly, delegate and alternate positions shall be allocated so as to fairly reflect the expressed presidential (or uncommitted) preference of the primary voters in each district. The National Convention delegates and alternates selected at the district level shall be allocated in proportion to the percentage of the primary vote won in that district by each preference, except that preferences falling below a 15% threshold shall not be awarded any delegates or alternates." (Section III, A.5. a.)

The Delegate Selection Plan also provides that "In order to ensure the district-level delegates are equally divided between men and women, delegate positions within each district will be designated by presidential preference beginning with the highest vote-getting presidential preference. The assignment of delegate positions, alternating by sex as mathematically practical, will continue with the next highest vote-getting preference in descending order until the gender of each position has been assigned."
